

SOLARVAC - SOLAMAGIC

QUALITY PRODUCTS TO LAST

Ducted Vacuum, Intercom, Security Systems, Monitoring, Solar Pool Heating, CCTV & Safes

SOLAMAGIC – SOLAR POOL HEATING

GENERAL HINTS FOR OWNERS

Your Solar Pool Heater is a very simple mechanism which should provide you with many years of enjoyable swimming.

As a rule you should find your best comfort temperature and leave the controller set on the Automatic Mode. This will allow the system to start, run or stop as is needed or as the solar energy available permits.

It is good practice to check your system for leaks from time to time.

Damage has been known to occur on the collector as a result of storms, parrots cutting it with their beaks and service people inadvertently walking across it. This usually means water loss to the pool and sometimes, if not detected early enough, rusting of gutters.

A watchful eye will avoid any of the above problems.

Once you have set your system up to your required temperature, and your pool is getting used regularly, check the chlorine level daily for the first week or so to ensure any adjustments that may be required in topping up are made. You will soon know how much you must add and how often as you become more familiar with your new system.

After a power failure, the temperature differential controller may need to be reset. If you omit to do so, it will automatically be defaulted to 28 degrees celsius.

Power 'spikes' may cause the controller to 'lock up'. This simply means that it will not accept any command and may or may no longer work properly. To reset the unit to factory defaults, unplug the unit from the power unit and leave it de-powered for up to 24 hours. Then simply re-power it back up and reprogram your comfort setting.

If you are going away for a few days or longer, it is recommended that the system be switched off at the power unit until you return.

Finally, we strongly recommend that you read the operating instructions of the controller and familiarise yourself with its usage.

We trust you will enjoy your new Solamagic Solar Pool Heater. Should you have any queries, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

